

Nyaradzo Digital legacy 101.2:

Memorialising social media accounts after the death of a loved one

Some social media platforms allow you to memorialise an account and this may be a preferable option as it is not as final as deleting/removing an account. The account will still be accessible to family and friends to share thoughts and memories of the deceased. In addition, the social networking site will no longer give out updates.

You will have to complete and submit an online request provided by the relevant social media site.

